QNX v0.86 Seap-x Telecom TI SI.Q; Doubts in using HttpSession as is Is it ok to use request.getReader to get xml file in xml web service? Is it ok to pass request to ServerApplication? I was told its ok as it have some method to write and read xml. Also I heard of JavaBeans and i felt that i can write a class that implements XmlRpcObject and by extending this class, I can add xml methods to my service. But I don't know how to write such a class, so can someone show me a way? A: Is it ok to use request.getReader to get xml file in xml web service? This is dangerous. It may make the web service vulnerable to cross-site scripting. Also, if the web service reads an external XML document, it makes the service dependent on that document, which can make the web service vulnerable to XML injection attacks. Is it ok to pass request to ServerApplication? This is generally ok, because the Servlet API's doSetter methods are handled for you. If you pass the object to the object, the Servlet API treats it as a property and will make sure that all the methods are called. So, there is no need to write a class for it. I was told its ok as it have some method to write and read xml. This is also

Menu Category: Nokia brand mobile phones Category: Nokia-branded mobile phones/News Re-opening delayed a day, board says Drainage issues kept The Grandeur development off and running yesterday. Drainage issues forced the reopening of The Grandeur to be delayed today. Developer F&R Development has closed the sale of the property today, however, work will need to be done on the site before ground is broken later this year. The Grandeur sold for $12.75 million, after F&R Development sold off a portion of its commercial section last year. John Busch, CEO of F&R Development, said everything went to plan and it is hoped construction of the residential portion of the project will begin in the first quarter of 2015. "Our goal is to have a final closing on the project in late December," Busch said. "We are closing in all of our land sales." Busch said the completion of The Grandeur could create as many as 400 jobs on the site. "This is a $200-million project," Busch said. "If it closes as planned, we are looking at an average of $1.50 million in revenues (each year), and a $100-million project to break even is within reach." F&R Development won the development rights to a 22-acre section of land, just off the south end of the community, in 2009. The Grandeur project will be a mixed-use residential community of up to 550 homes and include a golf course, marina, pool, clubhouse and retail components. "We are close to selling all the commercial lots we have and are close to opening it up for bids," Busch said. "The rest of the work will be about the improvements on the site." While news outlets have reported that the final sale price was just over $12 million, F&R Development has been renting out the commercial section of the land. Busch said the development group still holds $20 million worth of vacant commercial land at the site and still has a building in place. There are two kinds of residential sections in the community. ba24e880a
