8.1.0inOther : Penelitin lagiIso File:It was one of those days and I just wanted to do something different with my hair. I was given a choice of only two haircuts for that day and I chose the short one because it would be more easy to style. The haircut didn't feel right though so I decided to go with the long one. It looked good until the moment I walked out of the salon. The hairdresser's comment had made me realise that my hair wasn't just long but it was also thinning on the crown. I was shocked and in a hurry to contact my mother who was busy at the time. As my father had long hair, I saw him as the perfect person to learn from, but he just kept on turning me away. He would always say that he already knew a lot about life. He would be so smart and yet he would turn me away by treating me like a kid. He even denied me a chance of attending his classes because I was far too young to participate. All my life, he put his trust in me but because I wasn't able to provide for him, I grew to be the perfect son. I am so ashamed of what I have become. It's hard to accept my past and I am still living with the fear that I will one day meet with the same fate as my father. I feel that I've been ignoring the problem for a long time but when I was going through my most painful moments, it dawned on me that I need to do something. Many parents do the same thing to their children and that's why we have so many outcasts in this world. Parents should know that the children they raise are not their property, they are their children. We all should be treated as such. There are many paths a child can take in his or her life. Some will make it while others will fail miserably. The ones who make it should know that their parents do not stand a chance of
