The countries that offer higher prices for medicines include Canada, Israel and Germany, according to the WHO. The report – the first of its kind into prices across the world – came at a time of heightened awareness of such issues after the high cost of drugs for Aids, cancer and other diseases rocked global health. Co-author of the report Professor Tim Evans, from the Price of Medicines Coalition, said: “The aim of the study is to highlight the situation of very high out of pocket costs.” Governments should listen to what their citizens are telling them – they want to pay lower prices.” The report says that while prices for drugs have come down in the past decade, this has not been evenly distributed and countries such as the US, Japan and China are still charging more for drugs than many other countries. More than a third of the world’s population lives on less than $2 a day. In wealthy countries like Britain and Australia patients are eligible for free or subsidised access to medicines. However, patients in developing nations may find out too late if they run out of their medicines. The analysis was carried out by the Institute of Health Metrics and Evaluation at the University of Washington. Their latest report looked at the prices of drugs in the 1.3bn person world. It found that in 2010, the world spent an estimated US$483 billion on health care. In the UK, the top 10 most expensive
